Everyone I run into these days wants to know how our construction project is moving along.

I’m happy to report everything is progressing nicely. The gallery wing exterior walls are complete, the roof (with skylights) is in place, and the interior walls and mechanicals are nearing completion. The new sculpture studio, two new glass studios, and cold shop are also on schedule. The furnace, re-heating chambers, annealing ovens, kilns, lapidary equipment for finishing glass, and retractable seating for group demonstrations are being installed and tested. In the meantime, the staff is hard at work planning for the operations of these new spaces.

In addition to publishing books on the entire new glass collection and highlights of the paperweight collection, the curatorial department has designed 75 installation cases and pedestals to present 154 glass and ceramic objects in the 11,000 sq. ft. new gallery wing. The wing’s 7,000 sq. ft. basement will serve as an object vault with 3,500 running feet of cabinets and storage shelving supporting more than 3,800 three-dimensional objects from the permanent collection.

Brent Swanson has been hired as our Glass Programs Manager to oversee the installation and proper operation of the equipment in the glass blowing studio and to begin planning classroom schedules, demonstrations and special events for our students and visitors. Brent has worked with glass for over 15 years, taught at the College of Creative Studies in Detroit, and has worked as a glass blower/demonstrator at the Henry Ford Museum. In addition, Brent is working with Art School Director Donovan Entrekin on an elaborate schedule of programs and classes funded by an exceptionally generous grant from the C. S. Mott Foundation leaving only the funding for a $1 million equipment and furnishings budget to be raised. Also, when we broke ground to begin construction, we announced an endowment goal of $4 million to support increases in expenses for operating the new studios. To date, we have raised 85% of our equipment fund goal and 25% of our endowment goal.

The excitement is growing and I’d like to thank all of you who have contributed so far to the project. It will take everyone’s help to meet our goals so if you have not yet given, please consider doing so.

The Eccentric Vision of William Stolpin

through 1.7.18

Graphics Gallery

Well-known local artist William (Bill) Stolpin knew he wanted to explore the possibilities of printmaking in junior high school. One year, he made a linoleum block Christmas card that had seven different blocks and 15 colors, a highly technical project for a novice printmaker. He became well-versed in all printmaking techniques, but focused his career on screen printing, relief, intaglio, and lithographic artworks. His subjects were as varied as his techniques. He explored everything from nature and abstraction to fantasy and outer space. Twenty-nine works from the artist’s prolific career are on display in The Eccentric Vision of William Stolpin.

The Art of Containment

Vessels from the Sidney Swidler Collection

through 3.18.18

Ann K. Walch-Chan Gallery

A retired architect, Sidney Swidler’s fascination with ceramics collecting was influenced by his work as a designer. Swidler has amassed more than 1,000 contemporary ceramic objects since 1984—the vessel form being one of his favorites. He recently donated over 100 pieces from his large collection to the FIA. Whether traditionally inspired or uniquely modern, the objects in The Art of Containment: Vessels from the Sidney Swidler Collection illustrate the versatility of the vessel.

Many of the ceramics in this exhibition feature special glazes, experimental firing techniques, and abstract interpretations of the vessel form. For instance, the mesmerizing bursts of shimmering color that dot the surface of this vessel were created by using a crystalline glaze. This special effects glaze is made primarily of particles of zinc oxide and silica. These two ingredients, along with others, are mixed with water and applied to the vessel in a thick paste. While at peak temperature in the kiln, a chemical reaction takes place between the zinc oxide and the silica, forming seed crystals. Once the object starts to cool, the crystals grow and take a circular shape.

Ubuhle Women: Beadwork & the Art of Independence showcases a new form of textile art known as ndwango, developed by a community of women living and working together in rural KwaZulu-Natal, South Africa. Established in 1999 by two women—Ntombephi “Induna” Ntobela and Bev Gibson—on a former sugar plantation, the Ubuhle [pronounced Uh-Buk-lay] began as a way of creating employment for rural women combining traditional skills—like beadwork—and making them profitable.

Ubuhle means “beauty” in the Xhosa [Ho-Sa] and Zulu languages and describes the shimmering quality of light on glass, which has a particular spiritual significance for the Xhosa people. By stretching textile (ndwango) like a canvas, the artists transform the flat cloth into a contemporary art form colored with Czech glass beads. The artwork provides an emotional outlet for a community affected by HIV/AIDS and low employment, as well as a route for financial independence for the artists.

Ubuhle Women: Beadwork and the Art of Independence was developed by the Smithsonian Anacostia Community Museum, Washington, DC in cooperation with Curators Bev Gibson, Ubuhle Beads, and James Green, and is organized for tour by International Arts and Artists.

Community Gala
Saturday 1.20.18 6p–9p
The Flint Institute of Arts will celebrate the opening of the exhibition Ubuhle Women: Beadwork and the Art of Independence with the 11th Annual Community Gala. The gala will feature a conversation with Curator Bev Gibson and Ubuhle artists Ntombephi “Induna” Ntobela and Zandile Ntobela, in which they will discuss the origins of the project, their experiences and artwork.

Following the discussion, view the exhibition and enjoy a reception with live music, strolling supper and a cash bar. See page 20 for additional information.

Bev Gibson co-founded Ubuhle in 1999 and has been running the organization and marketing the jewelry, artwork, and ndwango since then. Gibson works very closely with the artists, including coordinating their housing and social needs. She has a Bachelors of Art degree in English and history and a higher diploma in Education. Post grad, she studied financial accounting. A mother of three, she lives on a cattle ranch, which, combined with Ubuhle, keeps her quite busy.

Ntombephi “Induna” Ntobela learned to bead from her grandmother, who wore beaded garments when she was a child. A master beader, she co-founded Ubuhle with Bev Gibson. Ntombephi is known as “Induna,” which means “leader,” a term of great respect in South Africa. The title also indicates the responsibility she feels for the community, viewing herself as the guardian of its future.

Zandile Ntobela is an accomplished beader and one of the community’s most successful artists. The annual flowering of ornamental Japanese cherry tree in the garden of Little Farm, where many of the artists live, has been a major source of inspiration for Zandile, and her pattern representing these flowers appears as the signature of her work.

Artists Demonstration
Sunday 1.21.18 1p–3p
Join Ubuhle artists Ntombephi “Induna” Ntobela and Zandile Ntobela in the gallery for a demonstration of their beadwork technique. During your visit, you may ask questions and watch them create intricate works of art.
Kawita Vatanajyankur’s art offers a powerful examination of the psychological, social, and cultural ways of viewing and valuing the continuing challenges of women’s everyday labor. In her videos, the artist undertakes physical experiments that playfully, often painfully, test her body’s limits—a challenge that is both unavoidably compelling and perplexing to watch.

The repetitive and arduous tasks that Vatanajyankur performs parody a pervasive slippage between human and machine, and spotlight the forgotten body within a technologically accelerating world. Beyond this literal translation, these gestures also make visible the invisible mechanisms that govern women’s everyday labor in her birthplace of Thailand. It is a place where, for many, daily chores aren’t always assisted by machines but are time-consuming, physically exhausting, and often the task of women.

It is telling that she describes her performances as “meditation postures,” when such grueling tests of resilience are the opposite of what might be considered Zen. But, for Vatanajyankur, extreme physical endurance offers a way to free herself from her mind: a mechanism to lose her sense of being. This deliberate objectification, she says, turns her body into sculpture. The Scale 2 and Squeezers explores the limitations of our bodies, the continuing challenges of mundane labor, and the ongoing tasks for feminism in a globalized and digitally networked world.

Stephen De Staebler
A resident of the California Bay Area since the late 1950s, Stephen De Staebler was best known for his work as a ceramic artist. Although he trained with well-known Abstract Expressionist painters at Black Mountain College in North Carolina, De Staebler discovered his chosen medium when he met the pioneering ceramicist Peter Voulkos at the University of California in the late 1950s. He called Voulkos his greatest teacher, and from him he learned to experiment more freely with materials.

Known for large-scale vertical clay columns associated in some way with the human figure, De Staebler did not aim to make an ideal form or exact likeness, but rather deconstructed forms. In the late 1970s, he turned to bronze after an injury inhibited his ability to create ceramic figure columns. According to De Staebler, “I learned quickly that the reason I needed bronze was to separate the figure even further from the ground and let it stand on its own form, which isn’t possible in clay.” This sense of separation is evident in the sculpture Walking Figure with Other, a recent museum purchase. A detached leg and “backbone” armature are suspended in space behind the left side of the figure—the shadowy “Other” of the title.

In his work with clay and bronze, De Staebler wanted to evoke a sense of passing time and permanence, as well as suggest the fragility of life. His sources of inspiration included his undergrad work in both religious studies and archaeology, and, in particular, his fascination with ancient sculpture. To create these fragmented sculptures, he kept discarded bits of fired clay in the backyard of his home—what he called his “boneyard.” He would pull pieces together and cast them in bronze, calling this process “spontaneous archaeology.”

expansion news

During the construction, the FIA Magazine will continue its Expansion News section. This will include construction updates, images, and an up-to-date list of donors to the project. The expansion is scheduled for completion by April 2018.

Donor Profile

Sorensen Gross Company

For the last decade, Sorensen Gross Company has worked on six renovation and expansion projects at the Flint Institute of Arts. The knowledge and expertise of the Sorensen Gross team has positively affected the success of each project.

Another way that Sorensen Gross has impacted the FIA is by giving a lead gift to the Equipment Fund and recognizing their Project Manager, Sahar Abdallah. Ms. Abdallah has overseen all of these intricate projects. Sorensen Gross commemorated her dedication by naming the Art School Flameworking Studio in her honor. Ghassan Saab, Chief Executive Officer, explained, “You are only as good as the team you have working with you, and we are very fortunate to have Sahar working with us. She deserves this recognition.”

Contributions

Several major equipment purchases still need funding, including glass furnaces; annealing ovens; elevator; seating; studio furniture; audio/video equipment; and gallery lighting. We wish to thank all those who have made contributions to the Capital Campaign so far. Our goal is an additional $1 million for equipment and $4 million of endowment to support the expanded operation.

Keep the flame burning with your contributions. Contact Kathryn Sharbaugh at ksharbaugh@flintarts.org, call 810.234.1695, or visit flintarts.org.

Catherine Kernan

Each year, the Flint Print Club commissions an artist to produce a print to augment both the FIA’s collection and the pursuit of personal collecting. The Club is limited to 100 members in good standing at the Family level or above. Flint Print Club dues are $250.00 annually, which provide each participating member with a selected print and related programs.

The FIA is pleased to announce that Catherine Kernan is the artist chosen for the 2017 commissioned print—the club’s first-ever relief print in its 11-year history. As an experienced and dedicated teacher of printmaking for over 30 years, Kernan exemplifies the club’s mission of educating the general public about prints and printmaking. She is a nationally recognized advocate and practitioner of non-toxic printing technologies and uses environmentally friendly soy-based inks as opposed to conventional petroleum-based inks.

Her prints are inspired by patterns, rhythms, and reflections found in the natural world, specifically the juxtaposition of water and rock. “Working at the interface between printmaking and painting, I use large-scale woodblocks in unorthodox ways as a transfer tool to build images layer-by-layer in a painterly process of controlled accident. No longer a purist, I exploit any available tool or means to transfer color and form to surface. Interruption and interference with the ‘perfect transfer’ are integral to the process.”

Kernan received her BFA from the prestigious Cooper Union in New York City and her MFA from the University of Wisconsin/Madison. The recipient of numerous grants, she has exhibited her work widely and it is held in many public, private, and corporate collections across the United States.

You can learn more about the artist and her work on her website at catherinekernan.com.

Flint Institute of Arts Celebrates 90 Years!

What started as an art institute in 1928 has grown into the Flint Institute of Arts you know today. As we move through 2018, the FIA will commemorate its history and collection, as well as the many people who helped make the museum and art school Flint’s cultural gem for nearly a century.
take-a-seat

Show your support of the FIA by having an inscription of your choice engraved on a seat in the FIA Theater. Sponsoring a seat is a unique way to support the Endowment Campaign and honor or remember a special individual.

The FIA staff recently remembered their former colleague, Judy Irwin, by naming a seat in her memory. Judy’s husband, Robert, is pictured in the designated seat.

Martin Luther King Day: The Colors of Greatness

January 15 • 4p–6p
Studio 5

“If I cannot do great things, I can do small things in a great way.”
- Martin Luther King Jr.

Everyone has a favorite color—a color that makes us feel strong or happy or safe. It can remind us of important, life-changing events and, when combined, can tell a story. Martin Luther King’s story is one of greatness. As an advocate for peace, justice, truth, equality, and change, he inspired all of us to be more like him. To celebrate, weave a small personal reminder using colors as symbols of how MLK influenced your life.

Free and open to the public.

youth membership activity

Gearing Up for Steampunk

February 10 • 1p–3p
Studio 7

Steampunk artists are mixed media artists inspired by the Victorian era and science fiction. By combining gears, springs, brass, vintage papers, metallic paints, stencils, and charms, these artists give a modern twist to a bygone era. Youth Members will focus on creating a mixed media butterfly inspired by the Steampunk culture and Victorian butterfly collections. For the butterfly, we will be using heavy watercolor paper that will require good cutting skills. Materials are provided, however, young artists are encouraged to bring junk jewelry, broken watches, chains, single earrings, and old charms to personalize their creations.

Participants should plan to be present for the full two-hour project. Students must have an FIA Youth Membership to participate.

Youth memberships can be purchased in advance or at the door for $20 per child. These memberships include three activities per year.

Free to Youth Members.

family programs

Preschool Playdate: Favorite Foods

January 5 • 11a–11:45a

We will read Eating the Alphabet by Lois Ehlert, hunt for food in artwork in the galleries, and create our favorite food out of clay in the studio. Recommended for children ages 3 to 5 with a caregiver, but all ages are welcome.

Preschool Playdate: Creative Movement

February 2 • 11a–11:45a

We will read Move! by Robin Page and Steve Jenkins, move our bodies in response to sculptures in the galleries, and create our own sculptures that move in the studio. Recommended for children ages 3 to 5 with a caregiver, but all ages are welcome.

Art Explorers: Painting Shapes

January 19 • 11a–11:45a

Explore paint brushes and tempera paint in the studio. Then look for shapes in artworks in the galleries and listen to the story The Shape of Things by Dayle Ann Dodds. Recommended for children ages 18 to 36 months with a caregiver, but all ages are welcome.

Art Explorers: Feeling Textures

February 16 • 11a–11:45a

Investigate a variety of textures and use those materials to create a collage in the studio. Then look for textures in artworks in the galleries and listen to the story Spikey, Slimy, Smooth by Jane Brocket. Recommended for children ages 18 to 36 months with a caregiver, but all ages are welcome.

Egypt Uncovered: The Complete Ancient Epic
See Egypt through new eyes, as startling new discoveries emerge to tell the true story of the Pyramids, the Sphinx, and their ancient creators. This 5-part series, shot on location in Egypt and the Sudan, dispels fiction by presenting the latest archaeological and scientific evidence about ancient Egyptian civilization, with realistic 3-D computer animation sequences.

January 3
Chaos & Kings
The ancient Egyptians are the most enduring civilization of all time. Only now have scientists discovered that the roots of this great people may be much older and probably did not begin along the banks of the Nile. 70 miles west of the Nile in the Egyptian desert lies the first crude monuments to fallen kings. 50 min.

January 10
The Resurrection Machine
Scientists have long believed that the pyramids were built as resurrection machines for fallen pharaohs. These structures allowed the pharaoh to ascend into the afterlife. Now, new discoveries in the Valley of the Kings point to more structures that were connected to the ancient pyramids. Remnants of temples, mortuaries, and other enclosures seem to point to an even more sophisticated belief system. 50 min.

January 17
Age of Gold
Believing gold was the flesh of the sun god, pharaohs stopped at nothing to acquire it. Evidence suggests that the tombs of the ancient pharaohs were systematically robbed in order to finance the burials of future kings. King Tutankhamen’s tiny tomb is the only royal Egyptian tomb found intact with all its magnificence. But how did the Egyptians get their gold and keep it? 50 min.

January 24
Deities & Demons
Ancient Egyptians used gods to understand the forces of nature and the complex world around them. They created a world full of rituals that let all people communicate with gods and hope for an afterlife. Priests and Pharaohs were the only ones allowed to enter the temples of the gods, but scientists now believe that the statues of the gods were taken out for public worship during elaborate festivals. 50 min.

January 31
Postmortem
The final episode in this series highlights the way in which scientists can now reveal how ancient Egyptians lived and died. By using highly advanced computer scanning techniques, they can identify health problems such as arthritis and dental abscesses, and even produce detailed internal images of mummified bodies. 50 min.

February 7
Through a Lens Darkly
Inspired by Deborah Willis’s book Reflections in Black, Through a Lens Darkly is the first documentary to explore the American family photo album through the eyes of black photographers. Probing the recesses of American history, the filmmakers discover images that have been suppressed, forgotten, and lost. 92 min.

February 14
Auguste Rodin: The Kiss
This special Valentine’s Day presentation features Rodin’s The Kiss. The artwork is arguably the most sensual sculpture in the art of the past 150 years. Its subject matter is more daring than most people understand: it portrays a girl seducing a man. Discover the full and fascinating story behind this artwork, how it came to be created, and how it influenced other artists. 60 min.

February 21 - Double Feature
The Call of the Jitterbug
The first art form to break the color barrier, the Jitterbug brought blacks and whites together through dance in a time when integration was still far off. Interviews with musicians and dancers, combined with lively vintage footage, bring back the sights and sounds of this unique era. 36 min.

The Life & Art of William H. Johnson
The life of African American painter William H. Johnson was truly extraordinary. His artistic career mirrored the complexities of art and society between the two World Wars. Although Johnson remained largely unknown during his lifetime, his work survived, and he has become one of America’s most important artists. 25 min.

February 28
Independent Lens: More Than a Month
Shukree Hassan Tilghman, a young African American filmmaker, sets out on a cross-country campaign to end Black History Month. Through this thoughtful and humorous journey, he explores what the treatment of history tells us about race and equality in a “post-racial” America. 60 min.

book discussion

FIA book discussions focus on works of fiction and non-fiction related to art, art museums, or FIA collections. The first meeting for each book sets the stage by exploring artists and artwork related to the selected book. Two weeks later, the book is discussed. These free programs are offered on Wednesdays at 1:30p.

The Muralist

By B.A. Shapiro

Part I: Art History Presentation
January 24 • 1:30p

Part II: Book Discussion
February 7 • 1:30p

Isabel Hall

From the author of the New York Times bestseller The Art Forger comes a thrilling new novel of art, history, love, and politics that traces the life and mysterious disappearance of a brilliant young artist on the eve of World War II.

Alizée Benoit, an American painter working for the Works Progress Administration (WPA), vanishes in New York City in 1940 amid personal and political turmoil. No one knows what happened to her. Not her Jewish family living in German-occupied France. Not her artistic patron and political compatriot, Eleanor Roosevelt. Not her close-knit group of friends, including Mark Rothko, Jackson Pollock, and Lee Krasner. And, some 70 years later, not her great-niece, Danielle Abrams, who while working at Christie’s auction house uncovers enigmatic paintings hidden behind recently found works by those now famous Abstract Expressionist artists. Do they hold answers to the questions surrounding her missing aunt?

Entwining the lives of both historical and fictional characters, and moving between the past and the present, The Muralist plunges readers into the divisiveness of prewar politics and the largely forgotten plight of European refugees refused entrance to the United States. It captures both the inner workings of today’s New York art scene and the beginnings of the vibrant and quintessentially American school of Abstract Expressionism.

an empowering resolution

The theme of empowering creative women by helping them find financial independence runs through the exhibition Ubuhle Women: Beadwork and the Art of Independence. The Museum Shop would like to introduce that topic on a more local level. Rebel Nell exists to employ, educate, and empower women transitioning out of homelessness in Detroit. They repurpose fallen graffiti, revealing the beauty underneath each layer. In an even closer local connection, this collection is made from pieces of “the rock” in Flint. This jewelry allows you to show your Flint pride and help empower people to live better lives. What better way to start the new year?

Be sure to check out our selection of authentic merchandise related to the Ubuhle Women: Beadwork and the Art of Independence exhibition.
